Blayre has practiced civil litigation and has handled civil appeals full-time for over fifteen years, covering all aspects of business and construction disputes. She is a legal strategist, specializing in messy litigation with multiple parties or in multiple forums and serves as General Counsel for a variety of Texas corporations and individuals. Blayre serves Hance Scarborough clients in an of counsel capacity, and works with the full team at Hance Scarborough to achieve the client's goals. Blayre also maintains a separate practice through her firm VBPeña Law, PLLC.

Often, Blayre's aim is to keep her clients out of the courthouse by resolving disputes before they escalate. She is confident, capable, and skilled at seeking relief at the courthouse, from the first filing, through trial, and on appeal. In 2021, Blayre achieved Board Certification in Civil Appellate Law from the Texas Board of Legal Specialization. Although there are over 93,000 lawyers licensed to practice law in the State of Texas, there are only 400 lawyers in the State of Texas with this special designation at the time Blayre became certified. She was also the first lawyer in Williamson County to become board certified in Civil Appeals, and currently is the only attorney in Williamson County with this designation.

Blayre represents both Plaintiffs and Defendants, which gives her a unique perspective in defending cases aggressively. She has also represented all subsets of parties in construction disputes, including general contractors, subcontractors, owners, and sureties. Blayre has first-chaired jury and non-jury trials and received favorable verdicts in her clients' favor. She has handled cases all over the state of Texas including in Austin, Dallas, Georgetown, Houston, Lubbock, and McAllen, and has established a strong reputation as a zealous advocate with both judges and her peers.

Experience

In her litigation practice, Ms. Peña represents large and small businesses, as well as individuals and environmental groups, primarily in Travis and Williamson County. Ms. Peña's legal experience encompasses all aspects of commercial litigation, including construction, government, environmental, employment, contracts, business torts, real estate, legal malpractice, trade secrets and technology. Ms. Peña has both represented and sued governmental entities, and is very familiar with sovereign immunity issues, the open meetings act, and the public information act.

Ms. Peña's practice includes representing both Plaintiffs and Defendants, which gives her a unique perspective. Ms. Peña has first chaired jury and non-jury trials and received favorable verdicts in her clients favor.
